Reds Smash Nazis Near Moscow, Retake Part of Rostov

Soviet Get 10 Villages In Attacks

British Tank Units Clash With Rommel's Main Divisions as Others Close Circle

Retreat Is Hinted

German Lack of Fire From Artillery May Be Due to Retreat

(By The Associated Press)

Russia's Red armies reported today they had recaptured part of Rostov-on-Don in the Ukraine, smashed back German assault forces in three key sectors on the central front before Moscow, and killed more than 9,000 Nazis in bloody fighting along the 1,200-mile battleline.

Linked with this brightening picture of Russia's defense effort, a British broadcast said Red counterattacks on the north flank of Moscow's defense area had recaptured 10 villages between Klin and Kalinin, respectively 50 and 95 miles northwest of the capital. The Moscow radio said Gen. Gregory K. Zhukov's Red armies had launched a powerful counter-attack northwest of the capital, crossed the ice-topped Volga river and driven the Germans out of town after town in an advance still continuing.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters acknowledged that Soviet armies were fighting again "at Rostov," although previous Nazi reports asserted that German forces had pushed the Russians 35 miles beyond Rostov after capturing that Don river port, northern gateway to the Caucasus oil fields.

The German communiqué said the Russians suffered heavy losses in "ruthless renewed attacks" at Rostov, while the Soviet radio declared Red army troops had retaken the old section of the port city after a fierce fight.

The Nazi high command said German forces were clearing the center of the city in "necessary measures against the population which, contrary to international law, participated in fighting at the rear of German troops."

Sniping Is Probable

Presumably, this meant that when Red army troops stormed into the old part of Rostov, driving the Germans out, residents of the captured city brought out hidden arms and sniped at the Nazis from the rear.

On the central front, Hitler's high command claimed a new advance in the two-month-old drive on Moscow but gave no details. Soviet front-line dispatches said 2,000 Germans had been killed in the Klin sector, another 2,000 by Russian aerial attacks, and more than 5,000 in fighting around Leningrad.

The Moscow newspaper Pravda gave this summary of the struggle on the central front: Volokolassk, 65 miles northwest of Moscow—the Germans attempted to advance along a highway but were thrown back across a river and lost several towns. Mozhaisk, 57 miles west—the Germans were repulsed in trying to cross an anti-tank ditch. Stalingorsk, 120 miles southeast—Russian counter-attacks drove the Nazi invaders from two villages.

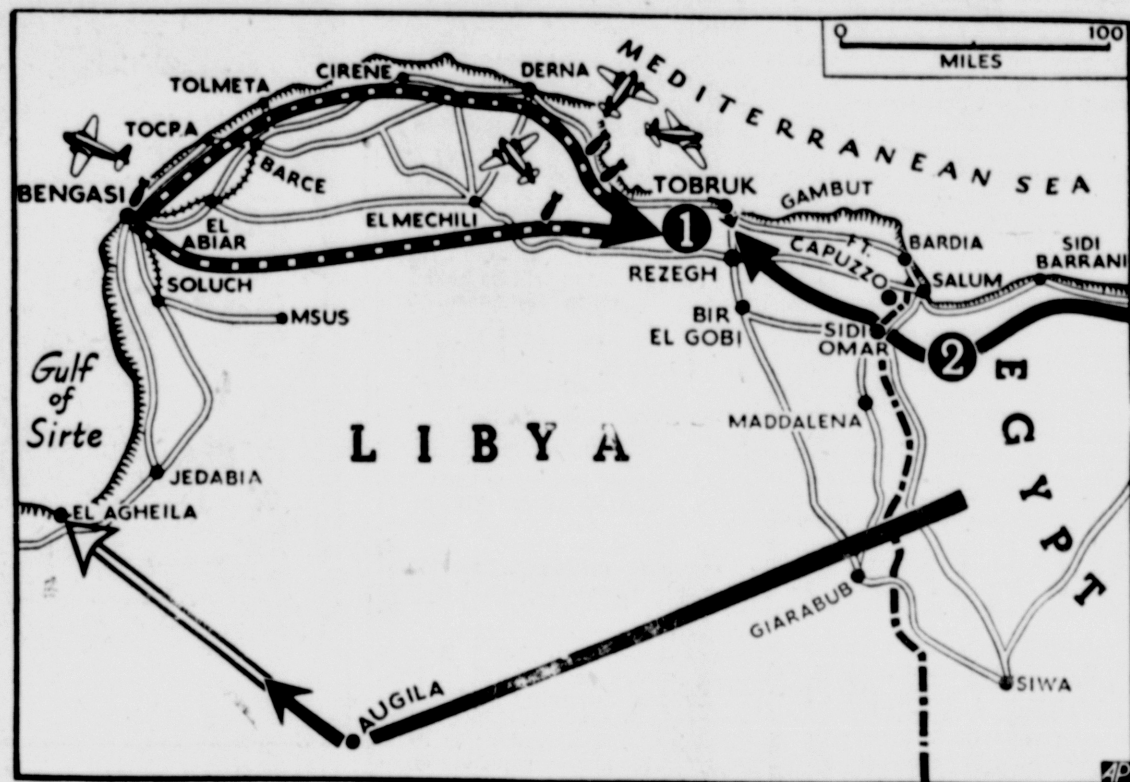

Bitter, all-night fighting raged along the entire front from Leningrad to Rostov, the Russians said. (Continued on Page 14)

Lion Gets Revenge

Mountain Lion Shows His Captor He's Not Dead During Skinning

Palm Spring, Calif., Nov. 29 (AP)—Carl Bradsher discovered the mountain lion he thought dead was very much alive—when he began to skin it. Bradsher encountered the animal on a quail hunt and felled it with three charges from a 12 gauge shotgun. As he started to skin the beast, it revived and attacked him, gashing his hands, face and legs. Bradsher said he first tried to choke the lion, then freed one hand to draw a 10-inch knife with which he completed the kill.

British Attack Enemy's Libyan Supply Lines

British planes were reported hammering at Axis supply lines (dotted lines) linking the port of Benghazi on the Libyan coast with Rezegh (1) where a mechanized battle continued. Rome said an Axis force had taken Sidi Omar (2) but the British claimed this unit had been cut up into roving bands. The British thrust in the south was believed advancing toward El Agheila.

Supervisors Pass Routine Matters; Will Meet Monday

Printing Bills Reported by Committee; Taylor Asks Fund, Says Costs Have Risen

Several resolutions calling for appropriations were offered Friday evening in the Board of Supervisors and a number of "routine" resolutions also were offered before the board adjourned until next Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The committee on distribution of grand jurors reported the list of grand jurors' names and the list, which will be filed on or before December 10 as required by law, was adopted and will be certified to the county clerk.

Printing bills amounting to $16,439.70 were reported by the committee on printing and the bills were audited and it was moved that the sum of $16,439.70 be raised on the county to pay the bills.

Justices' bills and constables' bills amounting to $437 were reported by the committee on town and county accounts and it was moved that the sum be assessed on the county.

Claims amounting to $760.25 were reported by the committee on commissioners of election and that sum will be raised on the county to pay the bills.

The committee on sheriff's accounts reported claims amounting to $21,095.86 and reported allowance of $21,079.72 and it was moved that this sum be raised on the county.

General asylum bills amounting to $402.30 were reported from the town of Rosendale by the committee on public welfare and the committee recommended that the bills in the amount of $364.80 be allowed and that that sum be assessed against property in the town of Rosendale.

Taylor Asks Appropriation
Dr. J. S. Taylor, director of the City of Kingston laboratory made his annual request for an appropriation for county work at the laboratory for the year from July 1, 1942 to June 30, 1943. He stated that there had been an increase in county work during the past year when some 1,100 more examinations had been made than in the preceding year. He also stated that costs would increase during the coming year because of increase in prices of materials. It was also reported that there had been an increase this year in the salary account due to the new status of employees through becoming a part of the Civil Service system. A request for $12,000 from the county for compensation for county work for the coming year was asked and the same contract for services would again be offered. Of the $12,000 appropriated, the county will be reimbursed one half by the state. The report was referred to the committee on Tuberculosis Hospital and Laboratory.

An appropriation of $6,000 was asked for the employment of public Health nurses in the county for the year 1942. This sum is lower than last year due to the fact that there is a balance of $5,500 (Continued on Page 14)

Without a Gun Women See Big Bear

"You always see them when you haven't got a gun," Hunters recognize this as the most common wail of the season, and two women out Fish Creek way, today realize the full truth of the statement.

It happened last night, said a gentleman this morning in a telephone call to The Freeman. The two women who live in the Fish Creek area were riding homeward in a car when the machine's lights caught the dark pattern of something by the roadside, near the Y. W. C. A. camp.

The car had been traveling slowly on the winding road and its driver drew to a stop to determine what manner of object stood hence. Lights from the auto had frightened the thing before them by the time the car had stopped and when they took that lingering look they witnessed animation in the form of a huge black bear which had reared on hind legs to its full height.

"Did the women get out of the car," asked a reporter.

"You know they didn't," said the gentleman.

Senate Gets Badly Battered Measure To Control Prices

House Passes Legislation by 224 to 161 After Major Concessions Are Effected

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—A badly-battered version of the administration's anti-inflation price control bill rested on the Senate's doorstep today after a wearing trip through the House, but there seemed little chance of its coming law before next year.

The legislation, which President Roosevelt requested four months ago to avert the threat of unchecked inflation arising from the huge defense spending program passed the House last night by a roll-call vote of 224 to 161, but only at the cost of major concessions and several defeats for administration forces.

Senate leaders indicated that while committee consideration of the measure might bring relative calm, there was little chance of Senate action on it at this session. It took the House banking committee more than three months to draft the bill.

Before the House agreed to approve the legislation, it performed a number of major operations on the measure, including changes which some members contended would be fatal. Administration leaders privately expressed hope, however, that some of the eliminated provisions could be restored in the Senate or by a joint Senate-House conference committee.

As approved by the House, the bill would authorize a price-control administrator to establish ceilings over commodity prices which get out of line with the rest of the price structure, but a board of review, provided at the insistence of the Republican membership, (Continued on Page 14)

Taylor Criticizes New York's Method Of Elbowing Crooks Once Timed Served

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—In eight years as a rough, tough district attorney, Thomas E. Dewey showed little mercy toward criminals; now, about to step from office, he has a kind word for some of them. One of his greatest dislikes, he said yesterday in a virtual valedictory preliminary to his return to private law practice January 1, is the official oppression of ex-convicts such as Irving (Waxey) Gordon. Waxey after they have paid their debt to society.

"They should be left alone and given a chance to rehabilitate themselves," the prosecutor asserted in criticizing officials who keep "pushing and elbowing crooks around" after they have served prison terms. Referring specifically to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's standing orders to the police department to throw out of the city such characters as Gordon—former beer baron whose prosecution for income tax evasion Dewey lists as his most important case—and Bookmaker

Observers Declare Japan Is Facing Serious Economic Strangulation

Congress Has Huge Task in Framing Anti-Strike Law

Bills Must Please Labor, Management and Public; Three Measures Are Being Considered

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—Congress today faced the formidable task of framing a strike-curbing law mutually acceptable to the public, labor and management.

While administration leaders in the House worked against odds to bring about a vote next week on the highly controversial issue, spokesmen for the nation's laborers renewed their opposition to the demands of 1,250,000 workers for pay increases totaling about $400,000,000 a year.

On the legislative front, the House leaders were enmeshed in an unusually difficult parliamentary situation. They were committed to give due consideration to some rather drastic legislation and at the same time allow some advantage to a milder measure recommended by the labor committee.

These bills were expected to provide the tests of strength: By the labor committee—give the national defense mediation board statutory power; create machinery for conciliation, mediation and voluntary arbitration and, as a last resort, authorize the government to take over a defense plant where production has been impeded by strikes, and impose penalties upon labor, if at fault.

By the naval committee—give legal authority for the mediation board and the conciliation and mediation processes, plus discretionary authority for President Roosevelt to invoke compulsory arbitration. If labor refused to accept an arbitration board's recommendation, it would lose its rights under the National Labor Relations Act, the Norris-La Guardia Act, and the Unemployment Compensation Law; a refusal to authorize the government to take over a plant would lead to the government taking over its plant.

Would Freeze Arrangements

By Rep. Smith (D-Va.)—freeze all existing open and closed shop arrangements, forbid sympathy, jurisdictional and boycott strikes, and prevent mass picketing and interference with workers who want to return to their jobs.

While House leaders planned strategy, the Senate prepared to consider, possibly next week, the bill by Senator Connally (D-Tex.) to authorize the government to take over a plant or mine, essential to defense, where production is impeded by a work stoppage.

On the railroad front, President Roosevelt's special factfinding board arranged to hear spokesmen for the carriers. The board hoped to wind up its hearings today and submit to Mr. Roosevelt Monday a recommendation for wage adjustments which will be acceptable to the workers and the companies, ending a threat of a strike set for December 7.

Either Tokyo Must Withdraw From Asiatic Continent and Axis or Be Prepared for Idle Industries; Agitation Reported in Tokyo

Manila, Nov. 29 (AP)—Japan must take some definite action—either withdraw from the Asiatic continent and the Axis or be prepared for idle industries, competent Far Eastern observers said today in an analysis of the background of the Japanese-American negotiations.

Japan's choice was said to lie between two alternatives: Agreement with the United States, which would mean withdrawal from the Asiatic continent and from the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis; and further military action in Asia, which probably would mean war.

All available reports from Japan indicate that there is increasing agitation there to break what the Japanese call economic encirclement by the United States, Britain, China, Netherlands East Indies and the Soviet Union.

In the words of the Japanese, this has become a "strangulation" choking their country to death economically and surrounding it with a tightening ring of steel. In short, while United States airplane factories, shipyards and munitions plants are working day and night in a great program just getting under way, Japan's industrial machine is creaking to a halt.

The Japanese are reported to be completing shortly two and possibly four 45,000-ton battleships, but otherwise the shipbuilding industry is crippled by lack of steel and Japan has no hope of matching the U. S. building program. Japan normally imports 33 strategic raw materials, but today she is getting nothing beyond coal from China, cotton from China, Brazil and Peru, some crude oil from Mexico, some rice and rubber from Indo-China, and rice and tin from Thailand.

Every gallon of aviation fuel burned by Japanese planes is non-replaceable. World markets are closed tightly to Japan's exporting silk and cotton industries except in India, China, Thailand and occupied China. The bulk of the Japanese merchant fleet of 5,000,000 tons is tied up.

Japan's leaders feel that they cannot wait much longer while the United States, Britain, China and the Netherlands East Indies strengthen their naval, aerial and land forces in the southwestern Pacific; while the Chinese air force strengthened by American-made warplanes, prepares for action against Japan and while the United States continues to send war materials to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Chungking government over the Burma road.

It also has been noticeable from the start of the campaign that the Germans have let the Italians do most of the talking about the fighting.

Communications Are Caged
The German daily communiques have been taciturn and cagey. The Italian communiques have been quite comprehensive and have contained many details not advanced by the Germans.

This did not happen by accident. Italian and German communiques, which form the historical official report of the Axis side of the war, are carefully coordinated before they are made public. That is one reason why they usually lag a little behind the fighting.

Manifestations of this kind strengthen the impression that the amount of men and material which Hitler can—or will—expend in the desert campaign has very definite limits. With reinforcement of the German armored forces in Libya difficult or impossible, the German commander takes the best way out—he hands the battle banner to Il Duce.

Were the Axis sure of victory in Cirenica, one may be certain that Germany would be preparing to take full credit for it. Instead, the Axis is facing the very real possibility of defeat, and Hitler cannot afford to take the responsibility for defeat.

Battle of Their Lives
Besides, the Germans still have the battle of their lives in Russia. There, as in the desert, the signs are increasing that German military strength is being conserved at the expense of Germany's allies.

Casualty lists from the Russian front are appearing as far away as Madrid; the Slovaks, even, are being pushed far forward on the southern Russian front. The Italians, for their part, badly need the flip to their military morale which is provided by the desperate struggle in the desert. This is their last stand in Africa; if they lose, it quite possibly will be their last real stand anywhere. They are having their chance to go down fighting and they are proudly taking it.

This, then, is no caporetto. Harry Newgold Held
Harry Newgold, 50, of 416 Ocean avenue, Malverne, L. I., was held at the Ulster county jail Friday night, pending a hearing before Surrogate James A. Delehanty of New York county. Newgold was arrested in Kingston by Deputy O'Brien on a warrant of commitment.

Crashes Into Bridge
Shortly after 2 o'clock Friday afternoon a large truck, loaded with stone, struck the concrete cover over the cables that support the Rondout Creek Bridge, as the truck was passing over the bridge. The cover, according to the police report, was moved some three feet, and the side of the truck damaged. No personal injuries were reported. Repairs to the concrete cover were made this morning by employees of the state highway department.

Nazi Agents Seek Peace For China

Tokyo Says America Refuses All Japanese Demands, Including No Aid to China

Chinese Plea Made

Authorized Source Says Without Aid China Can't Fight

(By The Associated Press)

In the Far East crisis, Japan's press and radio bitterly assailed the United States today, declaring that "America has no sincerity... has broken the peace" and that "the United States alone is responsible for what seems to be almost inevitable now"—in other words, war.

Amid an atmosphere reflecting alternate gloom and bristling hostility, Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo's cabinet met anew to deliberate on Japan's final stand on the negotiations with Washington.

President Roosevelt had laid the question of peace or war in the Pacific directly on Japan's doorstep, and that the White House statement that there was no possibility of a "compromise" with Japan on the China war key-note refusal by the United States to yield to any of Japan's demands. These include:

That the United States stop sending war aid to China.

That the ABCD powers of America, Britain, China and the Dutch East Indies stop their economic blockade against Japan.

And that the ABCD group recognize Japan's "co-prosperity sphere in East Asia" with its program for expansion southward. At Manila, it was said Nazi agents in the Far East are making a determined attempt to bring about a negotiated peace between Japan and China, quarters closely connected with Japan's puppet Chinese regime at Nanking disclosed today.

At the same time an authorized Chinese source declared that any lessening of United States aid to China might force Chungking to accept peace terms.

The German campaign was said to have been underway for some weeks.

Peace Feelers Advanced
Nanking sources said the Germans had advanced peace feelers through Premier Wang Ching-Wei's puppet government which maintains secret communication with some elements at Chungking, and that both Capt. Fritz Weidemann, formerly consul general at San Francisco, who recently arrived in Tokyo, and Heinrich Georg Stahmer, formerly a special German envoy to Tokyo who recently took up his post as ambassador to Nanking, had definite instructions from Hitler to seek a Chinese-Japanese rapprochement.

The German purpose was said to be the release of the Japanese army and air force now pinned down in China for thrusts in other directions in the Orient.

The outcome, Nanking quarters suggested, depended upon Japanese-American negotiations and whether these resulted in lessening the flow of supplies to Chiang Kai-Shek.

Drying up of supply sources might bring a collapse of morale at Chungking, it was said, because of a pretty general feeling among the war-weary populace that China has done her share of fighting. However, flat rejection of Japan's demands and a speeding up of supplies to Chungking probably would spur the Chinese to fight on, these quarters said.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, quoting authoritative Tokyo quarters, said that if the United States established an air patrol over the Burma Road—key route (Continued on Page Three)

Battle Is Waged

Nazi-Anglo Vessels Have Fight Near Cliffs on Kentish Coast

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—Naval vessels battled last night in Dover Strait near the Kentish Cliffs, and the gleam of their tracer bullets and the thud of their heavy guns marked the closest approach of German surface craft to England reported in the war.

Machine-guns were fired rapidly from decks shrouded in a thick mist. Cliff watchers said they believed both units were made up of light vessels.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Worries over threatened war with Japan, plus further tax selling, again ties up the stock market today although resulting in no especial weakness for leaders.

Dealings continued relatively lively because of persistent offerings to establish losses for income statements and transfers of around 400,000 shares were among the largest for any Saturday this year.

Among stocks American Telephone once more dipped to a new 1941 bottom. Backward most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Philip Morris, Kennecott, Westinghouse and Allied Chemical.

Receiving occasional support were Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Co., Consolidated Oil, North American Aviation, Montgomery Ward, Goodyear, Woolworth, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville, Southern Railway and Santa Fe.

Quotations by Morgan Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, 60 Beaver street, New York city, branch office, 48 Main street, R. B. Osterhout, manager.

Congress Has Huge Task in Framing Anti-Strike Law

The University of Oregon Law College, chairman of the board, reported, however, that both sides in the controversy may request the board to serve as a mediation body instead of sending a new report to the President. In that event, the strike presumably would be held in abeyance pending mediation.

Negotiations continued today in the labor controversy involving the captive coal mines, owned by steel companies. Dr. John R. Steelman, chairman of the three-man arbitration board meeting in New York, said he had received replies from virtually all of the mine operators as to whether they would be bound by the decisions of the board, but he did not say whether the answers were "yes" or "no."

Thomas E. Millip, president of the Weirton Steel Company notified Steelman that his firm, however, considered itself "compelled" to conform to the board's decision, although the company was opposed to the "closed" shop. The C. I. O. United Mine Workers demand a union shop, under which all miners would be forced to become members of the union after a certain period of employment.

The closed shop usually means that a worker must be a union member before he is employed.

Threat of trouble on the Great Lakes appeared dissipated with the announcement that striking A. F. L. tugmen who walked out as a result of a dispute with the Great Lakes Towing Company would go back to their jobs under a truce.

Terms of the agreement were not made public. About 30 men quit work in Buffalo Wednesday because of the alleged refusal of the firm to arbitrate the dismissal of a tug fireman.

Japan Raps U. S. As Asking for War

for China war supplies—Japan would regard it as a "directly hostile action" . . . an example of the most provocative armed aggression.

Domestically Japan would be unable to overlook such an extension of the United States "defensive zone" to the Far East regardless of whether the United States attempts to justify the move from the point of strict interpretation of international law.

President Roosevelt sped southward from Washington for a long-postponed visit to Warm Springs, Ga., stirring two types of speculation.

That the Chief Executive would not have left the White House if there had been any chance of hopeful further negotiations with Japan's special envoy, Saburo Kurusu.

That he would not have left if any sudden deterioration of the crisis were to be expected.

Dispatches from Chungking, Chinese provisional capital, said Chinese authorities expected that Japan would either strike into China's Yunnan Province to cut the Burma Road or invade Thailand in the event of war.

A British broadcast said Thailand had already sent a military representative to Singapore for conference with British officers—evidently in fear of such an attack.

Shanghai reports, meanwhile, said 70 or more Japanese troop transports had been seen recently sailing toward Hainan island or French Indo-China.

These reports came as the Tokyo radio was broadcasting sharp attacks upon the United States.

Yule Switch to Be Retires as Clerk

streamers and lights also grace Fair street down to Main street and the decorations end at Academy Park adjacent to the Governor Clinton Hotel. On Clinton avenue there are decorations from the Kirkland Hotel corner to Albany avenue.

A crew of men were busy today putting the finishing touches on the decorations and by 5 o'clock this afternoon all lights, streamers and pole decorations will be in place ready for the formal turning on of the lights.

From now until after Christmas the lights will be turned on each afternoon at 5 o'clock. But it is not necessary to wait until evening to admire the decorations, for in daylight the green arched streamers which run from pole to pole are gay with their hundreds of electric light bulbs bound tightly in the evergreen streamers like so many holly berries.

Laurel and evergreen streamers artistically arched from pole to pole mark the way to and through the business section. On each of the streamers in the center of the arched streamers are many types of Christmas decorations, including candles, Christmas bells, wreaths and other appropriate decorations. Each electric light pole is wound with evergreen streamers and at each corner intersection is a specially designed ornament without huge wreaths. These decorations take the form of square boxes showing Santa Claus climbing down a chimney or some other form of cheery display.

The decoration scheme this year was sponsored by the Kingston Uptown Business Association and the cost of the decorations were met by the generous contributions of the merchants over the area covered by the decorations.

This display this year is perhaps the most elaborate ever shown in Kingston and probably even outdistances the distinctive decorations which were used in Kingston several years ago when hundreds of small lighted trees were attached to every light pole in the business area. That year Kingston and its decorations caused favorable comment from everyone and the elaborate decorations were discussed in many distant cities. This year's decorations even rival those and should instill in every resident and shopper a proud Christmas spirit which will make Kingston the shopping center of a very large area.

In addition to the decorations erected through the cooperation of the association and merchants, there will be many individual decorations on stores and in show windows. In many stores these individual decorations are already appearing and the spirit of Christmas is definitely here.

Injured in Fall

Patrick O'Brien, 53, caretaker at the Schumann Hotel, Eddyville, was found lying at the foot of the cellar stairs in the hotel Friday afternoon by Bernard Lockwood, a neighbor, who heard his cries. Lockwood brought the man up to the main floor and Conner's ambulance took him to the Kingston Hospital where he was treated by Dr. D. S. Meyers. He had lost considerable blood from a severe cut on the back of the head. His condition this morning was reported to be good. O'Brien told Deputy Sheriff Vredenburg that he had fallen downstairs.

Presented With Radio

At noon today Lorraine B. Wood rounded out more than 44 years of service as a draftsman in the office of the city engineer in the city hall, and is retiring on a pension. Friday at noon Mr. Wood was called into the private office of City Engineer James G. Norton where his fellow employees in the city hall were gathered, and was presented with a portable radio. The presentation on behalf of Mr. Wood's fellow employees was made by City Engineer Norton.

Get-Together Is Held

Friday evening a get-together social of the pupils and teachers of the Rondout Presbyterian Sunday school was held in the chapel of the church. Fred L. Van Deusen presented a number of magical tricks and illusions during the evening. Mr. Van Deusen was assisted in making the evening a great success by the Rev. D. Linton Doherty, pastor of the church, and I. W. Scott, superintendent of the Sunday school. At the close of the program refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Board to Meet

Tuesday evening the Board of Education will hold a special meeting for the purpose of considering a resolution relative to the physical examinations being given to high school students, who wish to participate in athletic contests. At the meeting of the education board earlier in the week the matter was brought up and it was decided to hold the special meeting.

About the Folks

Jesse P. Osterhout, Sr., of Miller's Lane, is convalescing at the Kingston Hospital.

MINNIE E. RISELEY

After 28 years of efficient service as clerk in the city assessor's office in the city hall, Miss Minnie E. Riseley on December 5, is retiring from active service.

Miss Riseley during the many years she had served in the city assessor's office had worked through the administration of six mayors of Kingston. It was during the administration of Palmer Canfield as mayor that Miss Riseley assumed her duties in the city hall. Others who served as mayor while she was in the city's employ were Walter P. Crane, Morris Block, E. J. Dempsey, Eugene B. Carey and C. J. Heislman.

The late S. R. Devo, who operated the cider mill on Flatbush avenue, and who had also served the city as postmaster, was city assessor when Miss Riseley took the oath of office on June 2, 1913. The other city assessors she served under were: Fred H. Doremus, Morris Block, William G. Johnston, William B. Martin, Charles Lahl, and for the past 10 years under George W. Moore.

Miss Riseley in the more than a quarter of a century as a city employee has seen many changes in both the political and civic life of Kingston. Always efficient in her work she served during both Democratic and Republican administrations, and she was thoroughly familiar with all of the duties of the assessor's office. In her retirement to private life the city is losing the services of a most valued employee.

Legion Officials Attend Meeting Of County Group

Representatives of every Legion post in Ulster county gathered last night at the regular monthly meeting of the Ulster County Legion Organization as guests of the Lamoree-Hackett Post 72 of Saugerties, with County Commander Chester Bradford presiding.

William Stevens, commander of the Third District; Elmer Palmer, adjutant of the Third District; and "Pop" Wagner, chairman on membership for the Third District, attended.

There were also many Forty and Eighters and among them, Daniel W. Benton, Chef de Gare of Voiture Locale, 381.

Reports were given by committees including those on "Service" by County Officer Harry R. Karginan and by Jack Rabin, chairman on Americanism.

William Stevens, Third District commander, urged "all Legionnaires to stand by the decision of the Legion's stand at the last national convention to cooperate with the government in its foreign policy" as set forth by the President and Congress. "The safety of America will best be served," said Commander Stevens, "by stopping Hitler and all he stands for, now, rather than to be forced into a desperate struggle later on."

"Pop" Wagner lauded the efforts of the membership drive carried on by the county Legionnaires and awarded a number of citations to high-scoring members.

To Return South

Frank Cole, formerly of Kingston, but now retired and for two years a resident of St. Petersburg, Fla., will return Monday after spending a month with his mother, Mrs. Augustus Cole of Union Center and visiting old friends in this section. His father, Augustus Cole, who died August 6, 1940, past 95 years of age, was listed as the last surviving Civil War veteran of all those who went out from Ulster county in the stirring days of '61. He saw service with the famous Old Twentieth and according to his son outlived all the members of two Grand Army of the Republic Posts, that in Hudson county, where he resided for many years and his own post in Ulster county. His widow, at the age of 92, is reported to be in excellent health and spirits and is active for one of her years.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 29, 1941.

REMEMBER THE SHUT-INS

Now that the Thanksgiving holidays are over and the Red Cross membership roll call is about to end, our thoughts turn toward Christmas. And in the true spirit of the yule season we give thought to the less fortunate. The tuberculosis patients, who are in the hospital at this time, head the list on our Christmas list.

This year as in past years an appeal is being made for money or articles for the fifty-six patients in the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital on Golden Hill. As in the past, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the hospital is making plans for a happy Christmas-time for them. This cannot be done without the support of the friends of the patients and the members comprising the Ladies' Auxiliary. Each year a gift suggested by the patients had been presented to them. Christmas trees have been trimmed in the hospital, and a wreath placed in every bedroom window.

It is the least those who are able to carry on their normal activities in the outside world can do for the shut-ins.

If you will send your contributions, no matter how small, to Mrs. Frederic W. Holcomb, 188 Fair street, it will be greatly appreciated.

MISSISSIPPI TANKERS

Something new in river boats is the Minneapolis Husky, the first tanker ever to run on the Mississippi river. It is long and narrow, something like the ore boats of the Great Lakes. It is larger than some ocean tankers, though not suitable for any but coastwise ocean service.

Propelled by two Diesel engines the Husky can make nine miles an hour, a better speed than much of the river traffic. It carries in its hold 9,000 barrels of gasoline or fuel oil and can push a barge carrying as many more. There is also room on deck for a large cargo.

The Husky is an experiment. It is fitted with modern navigation instruments, electric steering gear, ship-to-shore radio telephone, intership communication and a new carbon dioxide fire extinguisher system. It will remain in service all winter, carrying oil up the Ohio river when the upper Mississippi is frozen. Its main purpose is to provide express service between the Louisiana oil fields and Minneapolis.

This is another illustration of how life on the Mississippi is not merely reviving but developing. The improvements may not seem so picturesque as conditions a few generations ago, unless a modern Mark Twain appears to do them justice.

RESTORING TRADE ROUTES

A reassuring note is found in the announcement of Pan American Airways that it will resume transatlantic service this winter on the route to Foynes, Ireland. That is part of the restoration of routes that was prohibited under the neutrality act, recently amended. Next spring, it is expected, similar connections will be renewed with important points in Newfoundland and other areas of the North Atlantic.

Thus step by step, it is hoped, we and other nations shall resume freedom for people and goods around the world. Every advance in that direction means resumption of modern civilization, which is based far more on international communication than the old cultures were. When we can travel freely everywhere again, the war will be really over.

SHADOW SHUDDERS

This generation, a little superior about the superstitions of other times and peoples, has a few eccentricities of its own. One of these, as revealed by activities in Hollywood, is a surprising enthusiasm for werewolves. Horror movies continue to be in great demand and the producers therefore continue to make them.

Have psychologists an explanation for this craving on the part of American moviegoers? With terror, tragedy and menace so real in a large part of the world and casting long shadows over this country, why should millions of men and women seek movies that "scare the living daylight out of them," as one reviewer says?

Perhaps the relief people feel when they come out of a theatre and realize that it was all make-believe carries over into the field of their other anxieties. Perhaps it makes them feel for a while that the war is not real, either.

If that is so, it is hardly a wholesome situation. Greater courage can be mustered by honestly facing the worst and working to prevent it than by pretending there is no danger and that the only horrors in 1941 are created by the artists of Hollywood for entertainment.

FORESTED COAL BARRENS

Making the desert bloom like the rose seems an easy task compared with making anything lovely of the barren areas left behind by open-cut stripping of coal. That is being done, however, in eastern Ohio.

Several coal companies have organized the Ohio Reclamation Committee which works in close cooperation with the United States Soil Conservation Service, the Ohio Division of Forestry and various sportsmen and farmer clubs.

The areas to be improved are studied carefully. Then the trees needed are ordered from the forestry division at the prices paid by rural land owner, from $4 to $8 a thousand, depending on age or size. The cost is borne by the group sponsoring the project.

This work was begun barely a year ago but has advanced at an increasing rate. Soon, it is believed, more acreage will be reclaimed yearly than is stripped, until no barren lands are left after coal stripping. In the first six months of this year 200,000 trees were set out, 80 per cent of which have survived. Forage and pasture crops were also planted. Conifers predominate, although locusts, which grow fast, have been planted on steep banks to check erosion. Some hardwoods have been used. In places, lakes have been made and it is planned to stock them with fish and waterfowl. There will be some financial return from all this, of course, when lumbering, 15 or 20 years from now, begins to yield a cash crop. But everybody will profit by the improvement.

SUDDEN INCREASE IN HEART RATE

The slightest change in the rate or strength of the heart beat naturally upsets most individuals because they know that, while the heart is only a pump, anything interfering with its pumping of blood may be serious.

There is, however, one type of heart disturbance that alarms the individual and his or her family but is not considered serious from the standpoint of life. This is paroxysmal tachycardia which means rapid heart rate coming in paroxysms—comes suddenly and disappears suddenly. The heart rate which has been 76 or 84, suddenly doubles to 152 or 168 or even up to 200. The individual may not be doing any physical or mental work or just eaten a heavy meal, yet the heart doubles its rate and increases in strength. It may continue at this rate for a few minutes or a few hours and some attacks may continue for days. In itself, tachycardia is not considered a serious matter unless there is present some other heart or lung condition.

Dr. Paul D. White, Boston, in Modern Concepts of Cardiovascular Diseases (heart and blood vessels), states that the outlook as far as life is concerned is good. Treatment consists mainly of reassurance, rest at the time of the attack, and avoiding excitement as far as possible.

The attack sometimes may be stopped by pressing on the eyeballs, pressing on the inner side of large muscle of neck which runs from breast bone to bony lump behind the ear, or pressing on large nerve supplying chest and abdomen, and other methods.

The drug most effective in the treatment of tachycardia is quinidine sulphate (not quinine sulphate), given in doses of 3 to 6 grains once, twice, or even three times at intervals of 2 hours after the attack.

The cause of paroxysmal tachycardia is unknown although it is thought to be due to some emotional disturbance such as domestic upsets, or disappointments in love or finance.

The thought, then, for the patient to remember is that an unsettled problem or problems or disappointments or frustrations may be causing attacks and that until these problems can be settled and disappointments forgotten, the attacks are likely to occur.

In the meantime, quietness and the use of quinidine sulphate will lessen the number and length of the attacks.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

One of the largest business transactions in Kingston occurred on December 10, 1922, when E. O. Rose, A. E. Rose and Vincent A. Gorman purchased the Herbert Carl Dry Goods Company on North Front street, at the head of Wall street, at a price estimated at $200,000.

The store was continued under the new management for a number of years. It now houses Montgomery Ward Company.

The store, the largest retail store in the city, was erected by the late Herbert Carl, who organized the Herbert Carl Dry Goods Company. Mr. Carl for years was one of the leading business men of the city, and active in civic affairs and in the Chamber of Commerce.

Turning from business to the religious side of the city's history I recall that in November, 1912, the Rev. Charles A. Holla became pastor of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, and the same month the Rev. Charles Mercer Hall resigned as rector of the Holy Cross Church.

It was in December of 1912, that the Rev. Joseph F. Rummel of St. Peter's Church was named dean of Ulster and Sullivan counties, a post he held for some years.

In November, 1922, Frank S. Barnum was elected president of the Kingston Local Union of Christian Endeavor at the annual meeting held in the Reformed Church of the Comforter. Other officers elected were: Miss Helen Haulenbeck and Miss Lillian Metcalf as vice presidents; Miss Ethel Kline as secretary; Miss Ruth Vredenburg as treasurer, and the Rev. R. P. Ingersoll of the Wurts Street Baptist Church as pastoral advisor.

The address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Lucas Beeve, pastor of the First Dutch Church.

Charles H. Knight for years one of the outstanding men in the business and musical life of the city died in November, 1922, of a heart attack. Mr. Knight was a composer of note and wrote a number of songs. He was the possessor of a fine baritone voice and took many important roles in local musical productions. For years he was identified with the now defunct Denmark Metal Cap Company factory on St. James street.

Another prominent man who died in December, 1922, was Franklin Tobey, Jr., for years general manager of the old Kingston Gas & Electric Company.

Mr. Tobey had come to Kingston as a young man to serve as assistant manager of the electric company, and later was promoted to manager. It was while he was general manager that the then new gas plant was built in Penckhookie, as well as the big receiving tank on St. James Court.

Soft Coal Strike Brings Up Query: When Is Arbitration Not Arbitration?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 29—When is an arbitration not an arbitration? That's a question which might be asked of government officials, including President Roosevelt, and of the executives of some of the steel companies.

For it appears that the strike in the captive coal mines was terminated a week ago on the acceptance by John L. Lewis for the miners union and by the U. S. Steel Corporation of a proposal to arbitrate but somebody happened to forget to invite the other steel companies into the picture.

Usually when there's an arbitration proposal, each party is asked in advance and told the terms of the procedure of the suggested arbitration and then given a chance to accept or reject the invitation. This, it turns out, was not done. Mr. Roosevelt got in touch with John Lewis and with the executives of the U. S. Steel Corporation but the other steel companies that own captive mines read in the newspapers that they were supposed to be parties to the arbitration.

This amazing set of circumstances appears not to have been discovered until a few days ago when Dr. John R. Steelman, selected by the President to act as impartial arbitrator with Mr. Lewis and Mr. Fairless of U. S. Steel, heard reports about the doubtful scope of the arbitration he was supposed to be handling. He promptly sent telegrams to all the steel companies and asked them if they would accept the results of the arbitration.

There is some reason to believe that some of the smaller steel companies are reluctant to answer. They are represented as believing that inasmuch as the National Defense Mediation Board refused twice to recommend a closed shop, there is nothing to arbitrate. They are reported to have said that the matter of closed or open shop is a basic principle which does not lend itself to arbitration.

If this view is retained by the smaller steel companies, then the President has appointed an arbitrator who will merely decide as between a few steel companies and the United Mine Workers. The assumption that the larger companies in the steel business can speak for the smaller ones or that there is concerted action among them is a fallacy. The activities of the well-known Department of Justice on the Sherman anti-trust law might have apprised the President that it is dangerous for executives of rival or competing companies even to be seen with each other, let alone to expect them to decide labor policy as an industry or group.

What irks some of the steel men is that Mr. Lewis knew who the third arbitrator was to be before he accepted the arbitration proposal and that now the smaller steel companies are expected to fall into line and accept as binding the decisions of an arbitrator who is really a government official.

The assumption that Dr. Steelman is a private citizen "on leave of absence" from the Department of Labor where his boss is Secretary Perkins is a little too big for the steel men to swallow. They say that it is a mere subterfuge and that if the purpose is to enable the President to back down and force a closed shop on the coal mines in the steel industry, then the administration will have stultified itself. For it will have told the country that the government cannot and will not compel anybody to accept a closed shop and yet here is an arbitrator who has been in the government till last week and who goes back again next week.

If he decides for a closed shop, will anybody believe that the President himself, didn't force a closed shop on the steel men?

It is beginning to be said that the President surrendered to Mr. Lewis and that Mr. Roosevelt isn't going to exert himself to get legislation preventing defense strikes, but the back with the steel companies, passing the buck to Congress to do the irksome job of writing and pushing through anti-strike legislation. The labor lobbies, knowing that Mr. Roosevelt is wobbling on the issue, are getting busy with the hope of toning down considerably, if not defeating altogether, any of the proposed anti-strike bills. Certainly the inside story of how the arbitration proposal was handled has not enhanced the administration's prestige as a sincere advocate of uninterrupted national defense production. With the Japanese situation growing more serious and with price controls and allocations of materials causing hardships and unemployment, to say nothing of the forced closing of many small businesses, it is likely that there will be a revolt in Congress as soon as it becomes apparent that a scheme to surrender to John Lewis has been foisted on the steel industry. The failure of the administration to handle the steel companies on the same basis as with John Lewis, and the appointment of a government official when the industry expected someone outside the government who had had no previous connection with the coal mining controversy, are not very eloquent testimonials to the ability of the administration to manage vital affairs of national defense in these troubled times. Honored Guests at Church Family Night

The congregation and friends of the Fair Street Reformed Church held a family night gathering last evening in the church hall, at which the Rev. and Mrs. Ernest Palen of New York city were the guests of honor. The Rev. Mr. Palen has served the church during the month of August for 10 years and it was in celebration of this service that the informal evening was planned.

Dr. Seeley, on behalf of the congregation, presented the Rev. Mr. Palen with a desk clock and pad as a token of appreciation for his services to the church and to Mrs. Palen a large basket of chrysanthemums. The Rev. Mr. Palen in reply said he did not consider the work he had done any added task but that it rather kept him in form during the summer months.

Following the program, refreshments were served by the ladies of the church under the direction of Mrs. Sherman Low. Co-chairmen of the decorating committee were the Misses Doris Kennedy and Clair Vanderlyn.

HASSOCKS IN HOME
Hassocks rate as one of the best selling gifts at Christmas time. Here are some of the duties they perform: They are admirable to sit on by the fireside. They serve as an ottoman, when placed before a cushioned chair. Many women like them as a dressing table bench. They are an excellent extra knock-about seat for study, game room or card room. In fact, you could call them "all purpose" furniture.

When you are planning a special dinner, consider serving a succulent duck or goose roast or if you are going to feed a large number of persons, settle for turkey. These fowl are not difficult to prepare when you have simple directions to follow, and the new Cookbooklet, "250 Ways to Prepare Poultry and Game Birds," gives you complete and easy-to-follow details on the preparation of all these birds.

For a truly sensational feast, give your guests this exotic dish:

Caneton a la Bigarde
2-pound duckling
Rind of 1/4 orange
2/3 cups thinly sliced carrots
Juice of one orange
1 cup currant jelly
1/4 cup kumme
2 slices toast

Roast duckling in moderate oven (325° F.) 30 to 40 minutes or until tender. Cut orange rind into thin strips and cook in boiling water for a few minutes, until slightly tender. Fry vegetables quickly in fat from duckling. Remove from pan. Add orange juice, jelly and kumme to remaining fat. Blend thoroughly. Place duckling on toast, surrounded with carrots, onions and orange rind. If desired garnish with orange segments placed on the breast, a half orange and a lettuce heart on a skewer run through breast of duck.

As an added attraction when you serve roast goose, or for another meal, make use of the goose necks in this way:

Stuffed Goose Necks
Goose meat (uncooked scraps)
Bread stuffing
Goose neck skins (removed whole)
1 onion, sliced
1 cup hot water

Grind scraps of goose meat fine and mix with stuffing. Tie one end of the neck skin tight with clean string and stuff with mixture. Tie other end. Place in baking pan add onion and water and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until brown and crisp, basting occasionally. Serve hot, sliced. Beef casing, which may be purchased at the market, or chicken, turkey and duck necks may be used instead of goose neck skins.

The Poultry Booklet is fourth in our series of 20 Cookbooklets and contains hundreds of other fascinating recipes to help you serve fowl more attractively. The first three booklets in the series, already released and still available, are "500 Snacks," "500 Delicious Dishes from Leftovers," and "250 Classic Cake Recipes."

Your copy of "250 Ways to Prepare Poultry and Game Birds," as well as the first three booklets in the series may be obtained by presenting ONE Coupon from page 2 of the Kingston Daily Freeman, with 15¢ at the nearest distributor listed upon the coupon or if you prefer, remit 16¢ with mail order coupon from page 2 to The Kingston Daily Freeman, Freeman Square, Cookbooklet Dept., Kingston, N. Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Blue Book of Etiquette," etc.)

A PROPRIETY QUIZ FROM THE ENGAGED

Three questions of seemingly contradictory propriety are these (1) Is it proper for a girl's fiancé to place his name on the mail box in the apartment house where she and her unmarried sister are living alone? (2) Is it proper or improper for her to move into the apartment her fiancé has rented and is furnishing for their future home a few weeks before the wedding day? He cannot move into it himself because he is settling things in a different office from which he is to be transferred immediately after the wedding. If he can move in the apartment it will give her a chance before and after her own office hours, to get their future home in readiness. (3) Is it proper for her to choose an uncle to give her away at her wedding instead of her step-father? (Her own father is dead.)

To these the answers are, (1) No. It wouldn't do at all. (2) Ordinarily it would not be proper, but in this case where the bridegroom has never lived there himself, and in view of the practicality of the bride's being able to get the apartment in readiness, it is not likely that anyone will criticize this plan. (3) It is the bride's privilege to choose whom ever she feels can most nearly take her father's place. That his brother should be her choice is very natural and could not be little her stepfather.

Wrangling Out of a Mistake
Dear Mrs. Post: When I was divorced several years ago the Court gave me the right to call myself Miss Mary Blank again. Without thinking of anything except the wish to discard as many reminders as possible of my unhappy marriage, I called myself Miss Mary Blank, both professionally and socially. I have regretted it in the time since.

"However, I am soon to put that problem away for good as I am getting married. But I am now faced with the question of the wording of our wedding announcements which are to be sent out in our own names. The usual form is Miss Mary Blank and Mr. John Groom have the honor to announce, etc., but I don't want to call myself Miss Mary Blank if I can help it.

Would it be too irregular to have these forms engraved without titles, but otherwise the same? Or is there any other solution by which I could wriggle out of my mistake?

Answer: From the point of view of etiquette, you should not have called yourself Miss Mary Blank in private life. However, since you have never been known by any other name since your divorce, I see no help for it but to continue and to send out your announcements reading, Miss Mary Blank and Mr. John Groom etc. You can't work an engraved form, Mary Blank and John Groom, without titles.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is, "COCKTAILS." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y. Leaflets cannot be mailed unless self-addressed envelope bears correct amount of postage.

When you are planning a special dinner, consider serving a succulent duck or goose roast or if you are going to feed a large number of persons, settle for turkey. These fowl are not difficult to prepare when you have simple directions to follow, and the new Cookbooklet, "250 Ways to Prepare Poultry and Game Birds," gives you complete and easy-to-follow details on the preparation of all these birds.

For a truly sensational feast, give your guests this exotic dish:

Caneton a la Bigarde
2-pound duckling
Rind of 1/4 orange
2/3 cups thinly sliced carrots
Juice of one orange
1 cup currant jelly
1/4 cup kumme
2 slices toast

Roast duckling in moderate oven (325° F.) 30 to 40 minutes or until tender. Cut orange rind into thin strips and cook in boiling water for a few minutes, until slightly tender. Fry vegetables quickly in fat from duckling. Remove from pan. Add orange juice, jelly and kumme to remaining fat. Blend thoroughly. Place duckling on toast, surrounded with carrots, onions and orange rind. If desired garnish with orange segments placed on the breast, a half orange and a lettuce heart on a skewer run through breast of duck.

As an added attraction when you serve roast goose, or for another meal, make use of the goose necks in this way:

Stuffed Goose Necks
Goose meat (uncooked scraps)
Bread stuffing
Goose neck skins (removed whole)
1 onion, sliced
1 cup hot water

Grind scraps of goose meat fine and mix with stuffing. Tie one end of the neck skin tight with clean string and stuff with mixture. Tie other end. Place in baking pan add onion and water and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) until brown and crisp, basting occasionally. Serve hot, sliced. Beef casing, which may be purchased at the market, or chicken, turkey and duck necks may be used instead of goose neck skins.

The Poultry Booklet is fourth in our series of 20 Cookbooklets and contains hundreds of other fascinating recipes to help you serve fowl more attractively. The first three booklets in the series, already released and still available, are "500 Snacks," "500 Delicious Dishes from Leftovers," and "250 Classic Cake Recipes."

We speak of democracy as a system of government distinguishable from other forms by its administrative features. It is much more than that.

It is a principle of government based on the fundamentals of equality, equal rights and opportunities under law, for which its citizens are responsible.

Furthermore, it operates not only by the dictates of an autocratic ruler but through administrators of the laws whom the people choose.

Democracy works by the compelling force of public sentiment.

'Tis always best to stop and pray before you claim the right of way.

A man was boasting of his strength, and how he had once felt an ox by a blow from his fist. Listener—That's not bad, but I once saw a chap knock down a factory with one blow of a hammer.

Boaster—Some Samson, that chap!

Listener—No, he wasn't much of a chap to look at, but he was a swell auctioneer!

Service—A pronounced either serve-ice or serve-us—depending on where you get it.

The Unknown Soldier
"Known but to God, engraved in marble deep.

Within a noble land, a soldier boy asleep.

Borne in tender arms from lands across the deep

And given honored couch in the last long sleep.

Angels sent by God, as in that other day

Awaits but the demand to roll the stone away.

BURDENS. When burdens grow too heavy, you can do one of two things. Either throw off part of the load for others to carry, or search within yourself for some hidden reservoir of strength, some renewed inspiration, that will make your burdens seem light.

Bob—Well, the finance company has put me on my feet again.

Joe—How, did they refinance your car?

Bob—No. They repossessed it.

Another Need
Now that a bombdispenser operates for us,

We want a debt-disburser
To clear up all the muss.

HITCH-HIKERS. There are too many persons in this country who have decided they would rather beg for what they want than work for it. They have become hitch-hikers, thumbing their way through life, with the taxpayers providing conveyance and the gasoline.

Ruth—How do you afford long holidays.

Mary—Easy. One month on the sands and 11 months on the rocks.

The man who toots his own horn soon has everybody dodging when he approaches.

Roberts—How did you meet your wife, Smith?

Smith—Well, I happened to be on an excursion, and Roberts—There you are. How often have I said it's foolish to be penny wise.

The world can get along with fewer cranks and more self-starters.

THE PHONE BOOTH MURDER

by Phoebe Atwood Taylor

Chapter Ten

Body In A Trunk

"WELL," Alfred said judicially, "it would, ma'am, but for the sake of the trunk. I think I'd better get a spade and a shovel and bury it like we planned, tonight. After all, Mrs. Clutterfield, we don't want anyone to find that body in our trunk. Remember that old lady in Bar Harbor, and the trouble we had there. Cost us quite a tidy sum in bribes before we was through, that time, and all because we didn't bury the body proper."

Asey pulled himself together and took a step forward, and then he paused at the front door of the inn. "Quite, thank you," Mrs. Clutterfield told her with icy politeness.

"The clams came, after all," Mrs. Doane said brightly. "You should have stayed here for dinner. I told you I thought they'd come."

"Really?" Mrs. Clutterfield said. "I had an excellent meal at the Country Club, thank you. Very good clams, and no waiting."

She turned suddenly and walked down the steps and got back into the car.

"Aren't you coming in?" Mrs. Doane sounded faintly worried.

"I have changed my mind," Mrs. Clutterfield announced. "I am going to accompany Alfred on an errand. I may be quite late."

Asey didn't jump for the car at once. His plan was to saunter up about the time that Alfred was bundling Mrs. Clutterfield up with the lap robe, and request some explanations before either of them could recover their poise.

But his plan didn't even begin to work out. It never had a chance.

With a speed that Asey never expected from a man of Alfred's wide girth, Alfred adjusted the lap robe, got in front, started the car, and had it rolling around the driveway turntable and out of the Inn grounds almost before Mrs. Doane had the front door shut, and seconds before Asey thought of moving.

"Flat foot!" Asey muttered in disgust. "Ole flat foot, that's what you are!"

There was no excuse for him. But at least, he thought as he crossed from the clump of lilacs to an arbor on the other side of the drive, at least Mrs. Clutterfield's license-plate numbers were engraved for all time on his mind, and there still might be time, when Hanson came, to look into this fantastic business of Mrs. Clutterfield and her man Friday.

From where he stood he could see Mrs. Doane talking to Freddy in the living room, and Asey found himself wondering just what would happen if he were to barge in and demand to be shown the body at once. With almost any other woman, and in almost any other house, his bluff would probably work. But at the thought of the combination of Mrs. Doane and all that maze of ells, Asey shook his head. He had nothing to back up his bluff, and they could deny everything, till the cows came home. It would be better to wait for Hanson and see what effect his brass buttons and official manner might produce.

Idea

Asey leaned against the arbor. To him, the time element was still the most puzzling thing about the removal of that woman's body. If the girl Freddy actually had gone directly downstairs and phoned Hanson when he told her to, and if she had stayed there in the living room until her mother returned, that margin of eight or nine minutes would be sharply reduced to only two or three. The thing, Asey thought, smacked of Thurston and Mulholland and Houdini. A woman was in a box. You saw her in a box. Then, presto! The box was empty and the woman gone.

"Mayo," he said suddenly aloud, "you're a fool! That's what happened here!"

He could see now, as he looked across at the Inn, that the ell in which the telephone booth was located, at the left of the living room, was far wider than the mere width of the booth. It was certainly three times the width of the booth.

Asey grinned with pleasure as he strode across the driveway. The side of the telephone closet opposite the door opened, and he ought to have known as much, even in candlelight and with a body against it. He had a closet at home in Wellfleet, under his front stairs, that could be entered from the hall on one side and from the sitting room on the other. Neither of the phone booths had been visible here at the Inn, but another door was the answer. Asey felt sure it had to be.

He went close to the little window in the ell and was reaching up to unhook the screen when the lights conveniently flashed on inside.

Before he ducked down, Asey saw all that he needed to convince him that, for the first time this evening, he had managed to hit the nail on the head.

The telephone booth backed onto a narrow hall, and on the opposite side of that hall was a series of doors, apparently leading into closets, which Asey found himself yearning to explore.

He looked up cautiously to find Mrs. Doane in the hall, removing a dustpan and brush from one of the closets. Then she turned her head and listened to some sound in the house, hurriedly returned the dustpan and brush to their place, and slipped away, leaving the lights on.

A few seconds later, rather to Asey's amazement, Mrs. Hingham slipped into the hall, walked along to the rear door of the phone booth, flipped a latch, and went inside.

Even from the brief glimpse he had of her face, Mrs. Hingham didn't look to Asey like a woman suffering from migraine. She looked to him rather like a woman suffering from intense bad temper.

She looked even angrier when she came out of the phone booth. Asey looked after her thoughtfully as she flounced up the narrow hall.

He had eliminated Mrs. Hingham from his mental list of people who might have removed the body from the phone booth, but now that he turned the matter over in his mind, it occurred to him that Mrs. Hingham, after sailing out of her room past Jennie and himself, had not appeared again until the conclusion of Mrs. Doane's lecture to her daughter.

He turned and looked expectantly at the headlights of the arriving car. It ought to be Hanson, but it would be all right with him if it turned out to be the overstuffed Mrs. Clutterfield and her nimble-footed yes man. That pair, Asey frankly admitted to himself, were preying on his mind more than Mrs. Hingham, Mrs. Doane, and Washy the Biffer all put together.

But the car which drew up to the front door was a custom-built Porter which he recognized as belonging to Quisset's leading citizen, Judge Houghton, a frequent visitor at the Porter house. His passenger, a tall, bearded man, jumped out after a brief conversation, ran up the steps and into the Inn. At least, Asey thought as the Judge's car swung around the turntable, the Whale Inn possessed one guest who seemed to be normal, without headaches or without a body that required burial.

He felt less sure of that conclusion a moment later when the bearded man came out, walked down the steps, and looked cautiously to the left and right as if he expected something ferocious lurking in the bushes to leap out and jump at him.

Then, staring down at the gravel, the man walked slowly along the driveway.

"Lost something?" Asey inquired as the man passed by him.

With a start, the man looked up, located Asey, and smiled.

"Yes, a cigarette lighter," he said. "Last time I lost it, a heavy rain turned it up—I say, I know you, Mayo. Asey Mayo, isn't it? I thought so. I called on you once a couple of summers ago. Remember?"

"I was tryin' to place your beard," Asey made his way around a flower bed and walked over to the man. "First I thought you was Bill Porter's explorer friend. But you're the genealogist, ain't you?"

"That's right. Rankin is the name. Jonathan Rankin." He shook hands with Asey. "I'm pleased you remember me. I remember our chat about the Mayo family, and also your excellent cousin—Jennie, wasn't it? She fed hot sugar gingerbread and told me more about the Mayos in an hour than I'd learned in six months. What in the world are you doing here, Mayo?"

"Wa-h. Asey drewled a little, "it's sort of an involved story, Mr. Rankin. It's my impression that there been a murder here, but—"

"What?"

"Uh-huh. But right now," Asey went on dryly, "if you was to ask me for proof, I'd look awful silly."

"What do you mean, man?"

Asey smiled. "I mean we had a body in a phone booth, an' now it ain't."

"You mean it's gone?" Rankin demanded. "Where?"

"It might not seem that way to you," Asey said, "but that's what I'm tryin' to find out right this minute. Look, you're stayin' here, ain't you? Then, he added as Rankin nodded, "will you, for Pete's sake, tell me something about this setup?"

"The Inn? Oh, it's rather a decent place. I've put up here off and on for five or six years. Tell me, who's been killed?"

"If you asked my Cousin Jennie," Asey said, "she'd tell you it was a woman she seen first alive, an' then dead, an' then walkin' past her. But don't let's go into that right now."

Baby Heroine

He and a fire department resuscitation squad hurried to the home and revived Joan and her mother and father.

Venison a la Carte
Watkins Glen, N. Y.—From Schuyler county's deer season comes this story:

An unidentified hunter shot a buck, which staggered toward a farmhouse. The farmer rushed out and the hunter shouted:

"Say, brother, that's my deer."

"That's all right with me, but get that doe off my property," the farmer replied.

At the word "doe" the hunter ran; the farmer dressed the 180-pound buck.

Employers' Tips On Technique in Securing Employees

Reversing the usual procedure of advising job-seekers how to tackle a prospective boss, Kenneth A. Simpson today offered employers a few tips on technique in seeking employees through the New York State Employment Service.

Mr. Simpson is manager of the New York State Employment Service office at 243 Fair street.

"If you as an employer object to employees who smoke, drink or wear colored shirts," he advises, "tell us, and we will send you only applicants who do not have these habits, at least as nearly as we can possibly determine by competent questioning."

"Don't dodge the salary question. I have seen scores of employers lose good applicants because they neglect to make definite statements regarding rate of pay. Don't say: 'It depends on how good the man is.' Fix a minimum wage for the job and remember to add, 'with the possibility of an increase if exceptionally well qualified.'"

"Describe your business to us at least those details that will involve the new employee. If you are a grocer seeking a clerk, tell us whether your business is whole-sale, retail, or manufacturing."

"Tell us what tools the man will need to use, and whether he must provide them himself."

"Must he be tall or short? Fat or lean? Do you seek blue eyes or brown, black hair or white?"

"Do you wish your employees to live nearby, in order to save loss of time in getting to work in inclement weather, through traffic tie-ups and under other adverse conditions?"

"How much experience must the successful candidate have had? What sort of training? What hours will he be required to work? Do you pay for overtime? Do you require references?"

"If you can describe the employee you wish, we can find him, or find her for you."

"If you wish us to make a selection and send you the one best qualified applicant, we can do this for you, quickly and impartially. If you prefer to make the selection yourself, let us know the total number of applicants you wish to interview in each case, and that number of top-ranking job-seekers will be sent to you. Almost every unemployed person in this area is registered with us, and the supply of available employees is therefore at our fingertips."

"If you seek an employee with such highly specialized qualifications that a candidate cannot be found locally our prompt and efficient statewide clearance machinery will be invoked to broadcast the call to each of our 93 offices which serve every county of the state. We can also resort to nationwide clearance. We are prepared, also, to save employers time and expense by employees that work is being resumed, by urging them to report place."

Shultis of Joneses Leads City League With 32 Points

Teammates Continue to Pace American Loop With Three Wins; Schwenks on Top

In the City Basketball League the Joneses have taken over first place in the American Division with three straight triumphs. Schwenks have a perfect record in the National Division with one victory.

While these two quintets take early season honors, Jess Shultis, ace forward of the Joneses, has established himself as the No. 1 scorer of the entire two circuits with a total of 32 points. Jess has collected 14 fields and four fouls.

Culver Ten Brock, Wimpsey ace pivot player, leads the National Division, but still second to Shultis in the complete running, with a collection of 12 fields and a foul for 25 points.

Rodino of Woodstock in the American Division is giving Shultis a heated fight with his 31 markers. Pat Bowers in the other division, but on the same team as Ten Brock, follows the lanky center with 23.

Schedule Is Given For C. E. Dartball; Ends During March

Each Society Will Play Opponent Twice; Six Teams Are Listed in Standings

The second season of the Ulster County Christian Endeavor Dartball League got under way this week with the Bloomington team defeating Ponckhockie Congregational three straight games in the first report on the league to date.

Ponckhockie was last year's champion and this defeat by Bloomington goes on the books as an upset.

The league this year consists of six teams: First Baptist, Port Ewen, Ponckhockie Congregational, Bloomington, Rosendale and Woodstock. The Big Six will feature keen competition throughout the season.

Each team will meet each of its opponents twice, once on its home board and once away. Games are so scheduled that each team will play two regularly scheduled games once every three weeks. This means that these games will in no way interfere with other dartball leagues, and with the many other C. E. activities which are carried on in the local churches.

The complete schedule for this year's Ulster county Christian Endeavor Dartball League is as follows. The results of all games are to be reported to Miss Peggy Randegger, of Bloomington, phone 929-W-2.

Future Book For ALL-AMERICA

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service

IT'S almost All-America time and September's long list of honor team candidates has been trimmed to a few dozen standouts. Here are those still in the running for backfield posts:

The sparkplug of the strong Texas Longhorns is stubby little JACK CRAIN, the leading scorer of the Southwest conference.

FRANKIE SINKWICH, whose broken jaw forced him to play several games in a protective headgear, has been a scoring ace in all of Georgia's contests. He ranks among the country's leading ground-gainers.

Ed Brannick Sees Dodgers in Fifth; Giants Will Build

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 29 (AP)—From his vantage point in a beach chair some 1,500 miles from Ebbets Field, New York Giants' Secretary Eddie Brannick sees the 1942 Brooklyn Dodgers as a fifth-place baseball club—and it will be all right with him if they finish eighth.

"Those Dodgers are strictly a one, one and one team," said Brannick, somewhat scornfully now that time has dimmed memories of last summer's race in which Brooklyn won the National League pennant and his own Giants came in sixth.

"They've got one real pitcher, Whitlow Wyatt; one infielder, Pee Wee Reese; one outfielder, Pete Rieser, and one catcher, Mickey Owen.

Beyond that, they're not so good."

"We have got to build," he explained. "We hope to have some big transactions—maybe not at Jacksonville but at the major league meeting in Chicago later."

Deer Season Ends Sunday; $500,000 Worth Is Killed

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 29 (AP)—Sundown tomorrow virtually ends a New York deer season in which 12 hunters and nearly $500,000 worth of venison were killed.

With less than 24 hours of the sport remaining elsewhere, Gardner Bump, state superintendent of game, said the take of deer by the greatest army of hunters on record would surpass that of last year. "And to make a fair comparison I'm not counting those killed in five counties where deer were hunted for the first time this fall," he added.

He reported 158,226 licenses issued in 1940 to hunters who bagged 13,641 deer and added that "meat alone of the average deer is worth $30."

The administrator also could prescribe ceilings for rents in defense areas, based on rents prevailing around April 1, 1940, if state and local governments failed to adopt his recommendations for such regulations within 60 days.

Recommittal, if not complete defeat, threatened the bill when the House began its final day of consideration of amendments yesterday. At the outset, however, Chairman Steagall (D-Ala.) of the banking committee began capitulating to the mounting bipartisan demands for revisions.

When the balloting was over, Rep. Short (R-Mo.) summed up the situation this way:

"A hodgepodge. I doubt that a single member of the committee knows now what's in this bill."

Reds Smash Nazis Near Moscow

with the Germans also intensifying their drive against Russia's beleaguered Crimean naval base at Sevastopol.

"The threat to Sevastopol is growing," the Soviet radio acknowledged.

British Engage Nazis

On the North African war front, Britain's desert armies were reported plunging westward across the sandy wastes of Libya, striking at the heart of Gen. Erwin Rommel's main German corps, while other imperial forces closed in on trapped Axis units between Tobruk and the Libyan-Egyptian frontier.

A bulletin from British Middle East headquarters said large British and Axis forces were locked in a great new tank battle southeast of Rezegh, 10 miles from Tobruk.

"Bitter fighting continues without either side having given or gained ground," the communique said.

The battle began yesterday and raged into the night, it was reported, with the Germans apparently struggling desperately to fight their way out of British encirclement while the British attempted to smash them into smaller groups as a prelude to annihilation.

The communique said British and New Zealand troops were "widening their corridor of contact" leading to long-besieged Tobruk.

Advices reaching London said the "artillery is thinning out" in the Tobruk sector, 90 miles west of Egypt, but it was uncertain whether they were being withdrawn to the west—indicating a German retreat.

The Nazi high command conceded that the British were pushing toward Tobruk, but a Berlin spokesman asserted that they had not yet established contact with the Tobruk garrison—as officially claimed by the British—and said Axis armored legions were executing encirclement attacks on British forces advancing from the southeast.

Premier Mussolini's high command reported the "annihilation" of a British motorized brigade along with the capture of more than 1,000 prisoners in bitter fighting in the central desert zone.

"At Tobruk, a new attack by the adversary in the easterly direction attempting to break the ring which holds him tightly was completely broken by troops of the Bologna division," the Fascist high command said.

By contrast, the British reported the destruction of almost the entire Bologna division.

British front-line reports said small pockets of Axis resistance were being mopped up along the Bardia road, while other pockets still held out at Sidi Omar.

Knaust Workers Turn Down Union

Local 17 of Newburgh Gets Rejected in Vote

At a National Labor Relations Board election held November 27 at Catskill, an overwhelming majority of employees of Knaust Brothers, Inc., rejected Local No. 17, Hodcarriers and Common Laborers Union of Newburgh as their bargaining representative.

The election was held as a result of a petition filed by Local 17 with the National Labor Relations Board in which it claimed to represent a majority of the company's employees working in growing houses. At a hearing held by the board in Kingston in October for the purpose of determining whether or not an election should be had, the union officials presented 99 cards purporting to have been signed by employees of the company designating Local 17 as their bargaining representative.

At the election, however, the union polled only 44 votes as against 101 cast by employees, indicating that they did not desire to be represented by Local 17.

The bargaining unit sought by the union and on which it was defeated was to have included employees in the company's growing houses located at Coeymans, Scho-dack, New Baltimore, Cossackie, Catskill, Saugerties, Alsen, Kingston, Rosendale and Binnewater. This comprised only about half of the company's employees. The others, including drivers, tray-car plant and farm employees and laboratory workers, have never made any attempt to organize.

Knaust Brothers, Inc., headed by Herman Knaust, president, and Henry Knaust, vice president, is reputed to be the largest mushroom concern in the country.

Attorney Reports Lesser Unable to 'Raise' Wages

Another adjournment in the case of Charles Lesser, 30, of Brooklyn, was taken in police court today when his attorney, Louis G. Bruhn, informed Judge Matthew V. Cahill that he had received a letter from Lesser's mother stating that she had been unable as yet to raise funds to pay the wages of the girls who had been employed in the defunct Eastern Garment Co. dress factory on lower Broadway.

Attorney Bruhn read the letter he had received in which Mrs. Lesser said that she expected to have the money by December 15.

Judge Cahill said he would adjourn the hearing until Saturday, December 20, and in case Mrs. Lesser was able to raise the money needed before that time the case would be disposed of as soon as the money was received.

Approximately $1,450 is due the girls who were employed in the factory when it suddenly closed its doors and Lesser disappeared.
